The Mind of the Negro as Reflected In Letters Written During the Crisis 1800-1860

CARTER GODWIN WOODSON

Cloth, 704 Pages Price $5.25 by mail

"How much I would give, if I could just get into the mind of that Negro for a few moments and see the world from his point of view! If I could just think black! The Negro after all is a problem!" So spoke one years ago.

This collection of letters makes a step in this direction. These documents not only show that the Negro was thinking about things which peculiarly concerned him, but that he made some observations which enable the reader to view men and measures of the antebellum period in a different light.

The Negro in the Reconstruction of Virginia

By ALRUTHEUS AMBUSH TAYLOR, A. M.
Author of The Negro in South Carolina during the Reconstruction.

Cloth, 300 pages Price, $2.15 by mail

South Carolina has been spoken of as one of the most unfortunate of the reconstructed States. Virginia has been regarded as one of the least affected thereby. This book, then, offers the opportunity for the study of this period from an angle slightly different from that of the treatment of South Carolina.

Although scientific, the work does not show the dull style of the monographist which taxes the mind of the student. The book is fraught with so many interesting scenes and comments that it grips the reader to the end. It is one of the most valuable historical works recently written.

The author largely restricts himself to the study of the Negro, but at the same time he says much more about other factors of the reconstruction than we can find elsewhere. Mr. Taylor has therefore demonstrated that the history of the reconstruction is yet to be written.

FREE NEGRO HEADS OF FAMILIES IN THE UNITED STATES IN 1830

A Valuable Statistical Report with an illuminating Introduction compiled under the Direction of and edited by

DR. CARTER G. WOODSON

Editor of the Journal of Negro History

The aim of this report on the Free Negro Heads of Families is to facilitate the further study of this neglected group. Most of these people have been forgotten. Persons supposedly well informed in history are surprised to learn today that about a half million, almost one-seventh of the Negroes in this country, were free prior to the emancipation in 1865. It is hardly believed that a considerable number of Negroes were owners of slaves themselves, and in some cases controlled large plantations.

By DR. CARTER G. WOODSON

A valuable treatise which holds the attention to the end of an entertaining and informing story. Without it the history of America cannot be known or appreciated. A CENTURY OF NEGRO MIGRATION

By DR. CARTER G. WOODSON

This is the first effort to trace the movements which have, during the last century, set the Negro population moving from the South to the North. Every phase of Negro life and history having a bearing on this neglected field has been adequately treated. Why the Negroes have gone, where they have settled, and what they are doing, are all carefully explained.

THE HISTORY OF THE NEGRO CHURCH

By DR. CARTER G. WOODSON

In one panorama the reader sees the coming of the early missionaries, the appearance of the Negro preacher as the result of liberalizing influences, the rise of the African church, its struggles with forces without and within, and finally its triumph as a socializing institution around whch develops the new life of a rising race. This book may be read with profit, therefore, by any seeker after the truth and must be read by all desiring to be informed as to the social forces at work in this country.

THE EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO PRIOR TO 1861

By DR. CARTER G. WOODSON

This book is unique in that it is the first attempt to write an account of the efforts put forth to enlighten the Negroes during the days of slavery. It is constantly referred to as an authority constituting a new page in the history of the black man. This is one of the few books treating Negro history scientifically.

Written about the "Black and Unknown Bards" who gave to the world the priceless treasure of those canticles of love and woe.

Written to show that there is developing among Negroes an empire of letters in a sequestered sphere, where a new philosophy of life is in the making.

Written by a scholar, a thinker, a philanthropist, a man, an all but martyr in the struggle for human rights.

Written in a useful form adapted to the need of the classroom, the library, and the home.

NEGRO ORATORS AND THEIR ORATIONS

By DR. CARTER G. WOODSON

Editor of the Journal of Negro History

This work presents an unbroken development of the thought of the Negro as it found expression in the spokesman of the race. Each leader is introduced with an informing sketch of his life. Then follow the orations in which the spokesman has given expression to the feelings of his particular group and suggested a program for the realization of its dreams. How these utterances connected with other thought and what they accomplished for the good of the cause may be studied further by using the footnotes appearing from page to page.

TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE

A BIOGRAPHY IN FRENCH

Edited with an Introduction and Notes and Vocabulary

By G. R. SIMPSON, Ph. D.

Instructor in Modern Language in the Dunbar High School, Washington, D. C.

The purpose of this work is to present this interesting story as stimulating reading matter for French classes. While thus planned for teaching a language, the work is intended at the same time to increase the student's knowledge of history. The work will, therefore, prove to be useful not only to the teachers and students but will make a useful volume for anyone interested in studying Western civilization as it affected the Negro rising in the French colonies more than a century ago.

THE NEGRO IN SOUTH CAROLINA DURING THE RECONSTRUCTION

By A. A. TAYLOR, A.B., A.M.

Associate Investigator of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History

This book comes unexpectedly in response to an urgent need. Teachers of history questioning the unsupported assertions of historians writing on the Reconstruction have longed for a scientific treatment of the period by some liberal-minded person far removed from either side of the conflict. This is just the sort of work which Mr. Taylor has fortunately produced.

FICTION

THE CONSTANT SIMP, by Nell Martin.

The uproariously amusing story of a "dumbbell" stenographer who is not as dumb as she pretends, and her employer—a clientless young attorney. He tries to discharge her in the very first page but can't, because she doesn't know what he means. She gets clients for him—somehow—moves him into a big suite in an expensive office building while he is sick with the mumps, and in the end makes a judge out of him. Clean, wholesome, bubbling humor.

12mo. 310 pages. $2.00.

THE MIDNIGHT KING, by George Delamare.

(Translated from the French)

Bismarck, Richard Wagner and King Ludwig of Bavaria are three of the famous characters who vitalize this amazing story of love and intrigue in the middle nineteenth century. A beautiful woman spy and secret political agents guided by a master mind in chicanery are elements in a rapidly moving drama involving the fate of a great dynasty. A gripping story of romance and international politics. 12mo. $2.00. (Published in Sept.)

DON COYOTE, by Whitman Chambers.

Here is a quickly-moving tale of the high Sierras with most of the action taking place in and around an old gold mine. The struggle for control of the mine enlists the sympathy of Don Quixote—Don Coyote to the men of the range—in behalf of the heroine's father who has risked his entire fortune on the property. Don Coyote is a self-made mining engineer and through his resourcefulness and courage he escapes assassination, prevents the destruction of the mine workings, locates an old chamber containing a huge fortune in low-grade ore and prevents an elopement of the heroine and a wealthy admirer who was responsible for all the troubles. Of course she was in love with Don Coyote all the time and he simply substitutes for his rival in the completion of the elopement plans.

An unusually strong story of the west by an author whose work is stamped with sincerity and success. 12mo. $2.00.

THE MOSAIC EARRING, by Columbia Boyer.

A wealthy young idler finds himself suddenly the central figure in the plots of a huge criminal ring of international proportions. Swayed by the sport the game promises, and influenced somewhat by the photograph of a mysterious girl with which he falls in love, he undertakes at the request of the police to learn the identity of the leader of the band and break it up from the inside. In the course of hair-raising adventures he is believed by one group of the band to be the secretive over-lord from whom they take their orders and he sits at the head of their council table when one of the most sensational crimes in police annals is planned.

As a result of his daring, police departments in all the large cities of the country are able to move simultaneously in the roundup of crooks who had victimized banks, business houses, jewelers, express companies, and homes of millions of dollars.

A detective story that is distinguished by logic and consistency. As for thrills, it is chock full of them. Not the least is the astonishing hold-up of the thousand or so guests at a celebrated ball where the Vice-President of the United States and several members of the cabinet were among the victims. 12mo. $2.00 net. (To be Published in Late October).

TRAVEL

THROUGH THE HEEL OF ITALY, by Katharine Hooker.

(Author of "Byways in Southern Tuscany" and "Wayfarers in Italy") With Map, and 38 Full Page Illustrations by Marion O. Hooker.

A delightfully told story of the wanderings of the author in the heel of the Italian boot—a region almost entirely unknown to the tourist and one of the most fascinating spots in the whole Italian peninsula. Medieval customs still distinguish the life of the villagers who are so cut off from the modern world that the casual contacts have left them almost completely untouched.

Mrs. Hooker knows her Italy. She not only knows it but loves it, and she brings into her story of towns and their people a rare sympathy and understanding that inevitably intrigues the reader. "I simply must go there," is the instant reaction of the lover of the picturesque. She has built enough of a historic background for the region to make it stand out sharply against the Saracen and Moorish influence that is still so prevalent in the architecture of the region and she provides a dependable guide to the best inns and restaurants and the places of interest to the sight-seer.

While Mrs. Hooker avoids all political questions a reading of this book is important to anyone who wants to understand Italian ambitions. Cloth. Full 8 vo. $5.00. (Published in October).

JUVENILE

DONALD IN NUMBERLAND, by Jean Murdoch Peedie.

With Sixteen Full Page Illustrations in Five Colors and Twelve Smaller Illustrations in Two Colors, by Berta and Elmer Hader.

An absolutely new idea in children's books.

Donald, unable to work out his simple problems in arithmetic, is kept after school. The numbers on the blackboard come to life and are thoroughly incensed at all children because of the mistreatment to which boys and girls have subjected them. They seize Donald, try him in their court, find him guilty of cruelty to numbers and sentenced him to seven days in Numberland. He is hurried off to serve his sentence and the remainder of the book is the amusing and educational story of Donald's experiences in Numberland where he becomes thoroughly acquainted with all the Number people and their perplexing games. He finds good friends among them and becomes adept in Addition, Subtraction, Multiplication, Division, Fractions and Decimals, in which they delight. Educators warmly approve "Donald in Numberland" because it simplifies their problem of making arithmetic interesting to children, but it is not in any sense a text book. It is a story of adventure, with a touch of the fairy quality, that appeals strongly to boys and girls of from 6 to 10 years of age. Boards, 8vo. $1.25.

MISCELLANEOUS

CHASM, by Mary Margaret McBride and Alexander Williams.

Decorations by Elmer S. Hader.

A delightful whimsical and witty story of charm and famous charming people. A book that is unique and of extraordinary value in the development of personality. It analyzes the qualities of charm and provides common-sense advice on how it may be cultivated by any person who recognizes the lack of it in themselves.

Beautifully printed and bound in gold and lavender with a silhouette jacket design of black on gold. Cloth and boards. 12mo. $2.50.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW? by Arthur Frank Payne, A.B., Ed.D. (Harvard)

A compilation of tests of intelligence, mental ability and personal aptitude by one of the country's foremost psychologists and vocational guidance authorities. These tests have been adapted to popular use as a result of long practical application of them in schools, colleges and employment offices. They are arranged for entertainment of a single reader or a group of persons, but they have particular value for teachers and personal directors.

Salesmanship and Business Efficiency

By J. S. KNOX

Salesmanship and Business Efficiency has had a sale of a quarter of a million copies in the United States and nineteen foreign countries. Twelve great corporations have bought and used 36,399 copies for their own employees. No equal sale of any other salesmanship book has ever been known.

This book contains the greatest selling tactics, strategy and closing arguments developed by the greatest sales organizations of America during the last quarter of a century. It is as fascinating as a novel and as valuable as a little gold mine.

"Salesmanship and Business Efficiency was worth one thousand dollars in cold cash to me the first year after I got it."—O. Salisbury, President, Penn Oil and Supply Co., St. Joseph, Missouri.

The Science of Judging Men

By DR. EDWIN MORRELL

This book is a short course in Character Analysis. It analyzes people of different temperaments and shows why all people of the same temperament act and react in the same way. It analyzes many of the world's great leaders and shows the salesman how to handle them.

The book contains thirty-five cuts and photographs. It is fascinating from beginning to end. It contains analyses and information that are a revelation to the average man not only about other people, but about himself.

"Men in business are necessarily required to judge men and the information in this volume will be very helpful toward judging rightly," says Chas. W. Mears, famous advertising man and ex-President of the Cleveland Advertising Club.

Beautiful maroon cloth cover. 145 pages. $2.00, prepaid.

The Science and Art of Selling

By J. S. KNOX

This book contains many unusual features not found in any other work on Salesmanship. It has twenty-one charts that clearly visualize the fundamental factors of business, the human mind and how to deal with it, a sale and how it is made.

The book contains eight retail and specialty selling talks—the best that could be found in the entire country. One of them won a prize of $250.00. This feature alone is worth infinitely more than the price of the book.

A most valuable feature is an analysis of efficient and inefficient selling methods. In this department the individual is able to determine the difference between good and bad selling methods in any business.

Albert Sidney Gregg, the magazine writer, says: "It is not over-stating it to say that the author has condensed into one volume the essence of a dozen books."

To see this book is to want it.

THIRTY YEARS AMONG THE DEAD
By Carl A. Wickland, M.D.

This book is of unusual interest to students of the problem of an after-life and the relationship between the two planes of existence, visible and invisible. The author does not seek to promulgate an ism or cult but presents the records of thirty years experimental research in this obscure field in the interest of psychological science—normal and abnormal. The evidence obtained with the assistance of Mrs. Wickland, the author's wife, whose remarkable psychic endowment has made direct contact with the invisible world possible, has indubitably demonstrated that and that discarnated Intelligences play an important role in human affairs, both for good and for evil.

DEATH, SO-CALLED, IS A MISNOMER

Abingdon Religious Education Texts.

DAVID G. DOWNEY, General Editor

NORMAN E. RICHARDSON } Associate
GEORGE HERBERT BETTS } Editors

The writers of the Abingdon Religious Education Texts have all been selected because of their loyalty to six primary considerations: (1) The fundamentals of Evangelical Christianity; (2) Scientific accuracy; (3) Intelligent sympathy with the denominational point of view and that spirit of interchurch cooperation which is making possible a national and even a world program; (4) The true function of religion in a program of community upbuilding; (5) The assembling and organizing of that knowledge which will be most helpful from the standpoint of practical efficiency, and around which inspiring enthusiasm on the part of both teacher and pupil can readily be fostered; (6) The meaning of religious education to American democracy.

These pamphlets deal with specific practical problems which parents face. Each pamphlet is devoted to a single subject. The material is entertainingly written and is suited to the needs of fathers and mothers. In every case sound principles of civic, moral, and religious education have been recognized, but this literature deals especially with the practical application of these principles. More and more the nation is depending upon the home for those qualities of citizenship without which democracy cannot endure. The home is facing the challenge and responsibility of creating a new era. The Series is intended to help parents intelligently to face the new day and to create the highest type of American citizenship which the world has yet known.

These pamphlets deal with specific practical problems which parents face. Each pamphlet is devoted to a single subject. The material is entertainingly written and is suited to the needs of fathers and mothers. In every case sound principles of civic, moral, and religious education have been recognized, but this literature deals especially with the practical application of these principles. More and more the nation is depending upon the home for those qualities of citizenship without which democracy cannot endure. The home is facing the challenge and responsibility of creating a new era. The series is intended to help parents intelligently to face the new day and to create the highest type of American citizenship which the world has yet known.

These volumes were planned to fill that need. The general religious reader will be stimulated and inspired by the fresh revelation of the Christianity which lies at the heart of these festival observances.

Christ in High School Life. 12mo. $1.00.

The author declares that "this little book is the product of a great host of high-school boys," and he believes that these young people "need a handbook for daily devotions based on the application of the principles of Jesus to high-school problems."

Clark, Davis Wasgatt.

Child Labor and the Social Conscience. 12mo. Illustrated. $1.00.

One of the foulest blots on our national escutcheon is that of child labor. The author says that "the American conscience has been informed and quickened until it has finally and clearly discerned the essentially criminal character of Child Labor, has arrested and placed the culprit in the prisoner's dock and bidden him plead to the general charge of being an enemy-alien to the public welfare."

Clark, Felicia Buttz.

Jesuit, The. 12mo. $1.75.

A story of unusual strength and power of the mysterious and superstitious atmosphere of Rome.

Clark, Muriel.

When Jesus Was a Carpenter. 12mo. 75c.

There was a strong band of sympathy, fellowship and understanding between the Carpenter and the Children. They became friends and companions, and then the circle expanded and enclosed the mother and the father of the children, and other friends. And all of them were entranced by the radiance of His Personality, the kindliness of His spirit, the sincerity of His sympathy, the nobility of His utterances and the clearness and aptness of their spiritual meaning.

The author asserts that "Back to Wesley is forward into the spirit of what is best in the twentieth century. The best in Wesley is the best in religion in our day. The Puritan brought democracy into politics, but Wesley brought democracy into religion."

The purpose of this course of lessons is the training of children, that under the leadership of Christ they may live their lives in the light of this new day. In the years to come great things will be required of the children of to-day, and they must meet the future as Christian citizens strong to serve. To impress the story teaching, activities are provided that are positive in their teaching and offer opportunities for "learning through doing." The songs and poems have been thoughtfully chosen from among the best, and with due regard for the child's interest and experience.

The rapid development of community schools of religious education has made necessary the creation of a special series of texts. No such school can do its best work without suitable textbooks. This is particularly true of schools that have as their aim the training of teachers of religion. One of the most potent factors in making the class-room hour a time of enlightenment and of inspiration is a common rallying point of thinking on the part of both pupils and teachers—the assigned lesson in a trustworthy text.

The Abingdon series of Community Training School texts is being wrought out on the anvil of actual experience. In one instance, the material has actually been taught in five different community schools before being published. First-hand contact with a score of such schools is reflected in the editorial supervision. It is the hope of both writers and editors that these texts will do much to help local boards of religious education to standardize their training schools.

Thompson, James V. (With John E. Stout.) Daily Vacation Church School, The. *75c.; by mail, 85c.

The Daily Vacation Church School of religion has passed the experimental stage. Probably more than two thousand churches and communities have found in the long summer months free from the demands of public school, an opportunity for supplementing the child's instruction and making fruitful use of his leisure time. Interesting programs are being developed, trained instructors employed, and the best of the church's equipment devoted to these schools. Parents approve them, the children are enthusiastic over them, ministers count them one of the best agencies for the religious training of the young.

A vast expansion of the movement already so auspiciously begun awaits only the standardizing of a Daily Vacation Church School program and the organizing of text books for their special needs. It is the purpose of the volumes of the present series to minister to this pressing need.

Adventures with Christ in Latin America. 16mo. $1.00.

Bishop Miller remarks that Latin America has at times received scant attention in world missionary councils, and that from the missionary point of view most of our thinking has run around the world east and west, while as a matter of fact we should also be deeply concerned about the development of civilization—the vast area reaching from the Rio Grande to the Straits of Magellan. In this book he describes the progress of the work of the missionary throughout that part of the world.

The Abingdon Texts for WEEK-DAY SCHOOLS OF RELIGION are planned on the basis of a church school year running approximately parallel with the public school year. The lessons for each year provide material for from thirty-two to thirty-six weeks. Careful correlations are maintained with the public school curriculum on one hand and with that of the church on the other. The subject-matter is rich in biblical content, and also freely draws from literature, biography, nature and life.

Beginning with the kindergarten and continuing to the age of nine, one book is provided for each year, the lessons being sufficiently varied to prevent monotony of impression. From the age of nine, each text deals with one central theme; two texts, each covering one semester of lessons, are provided for each year.

The writers of these week-day texts understand the particular needs of this new type of school. They are acquainted with the religious nature and need of children and youth. They are well equipped for their task, and bring creative power to the producing of the volumes of this series.

The volumes are attractively printed and bound, and made equal in every way to public school texts.

Williams, Horace Blake.

Fundamentals of Faith in the Light of Modern Thought. 12mo. $1.25.

As for the main message of these pages—how much it is needed to-day! The world is noisy; we need to hear the Still Small Voice. The world is nervous; we need to catch our Lord's command to rest. The world has a great visible; we need to get sure glimpses of the Invisible.—Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

537 C. M.

JESUS, these eyes have never seen
That radiant form of thine;
The veil of sense hangs dark between
Thy blessèd face and mine.

2 I see thee not, I hear thee not,
Yet art thou oft with me;
And earth hath ne'er so dear a spot
As where I meet with thee.

3 Like some bright dream that comes unsought
When slumbers o'er me roll,
Thine image ever fills my thought,
And charms my ravished soul.

4 Yet though I have not seen, and still
Must rest in faith alone,
I love thee, dearest Lord, and will,
Unseen, but not unknown.

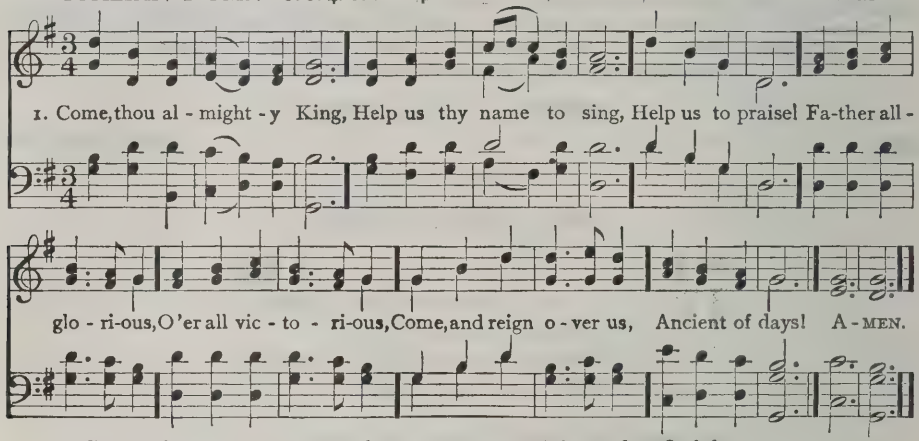
2 ITALIAN HYMN 6. 6. 4. 6. 6. 6. 4. FELICE GIARDINI



2 Come, thou Incarnate Word,
Gird on thy mighty sword,
Our prayer attend;
Come, and thy people bless,
And give thy word success:
Spirit of holiness,
On us descend!

3 Come, Holy Comforter,
Thy sacred witness bear,
In this glad hour:
Thou who almighty art,
Now rule in every heart,
And ne'er from us depart,
Spirit of power!

4 To the great One and Three,
Eternal praises be
Hence, evermore:
His sovereign majesty
May we in glory see,
And to eternity
Love and adore!

Church Records and Account Books.

FOR THE PASTOR, TREASURER, FINANCIAL SECRETARY, AND RECORDING STEWARD.

The Official Church Records.

PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE, 1916. SEE JOURNAL, 1916, pp. 359, 575. Revised, 1920.

A new system of records, arranged and approved by the General Conference Committee on Records and Requisites, and conforming to General Conference legislation, has been published and has been installed in a great many of our churches. We believe that this system of church records is the best that the church has ever had to carry on its work efficiently. The Committee in planning this record system had in mind the card system for the everyday use of the pastor in his study; the Permanent Membership Roll for record of matters not called for in the daily work of the church, and the Bound Historical Volume for the record of events which, once made, are not subject to alteration and which should be accessible far into the future. That the system may be thoroughly understood by the churches who are not yet using it, and who are contemplating the purchasing of new records, we would give the following information as to the records available.

The big, bulky, unwieldy Church record is a thing of the past. In its place are two small, neat volumes. The reason for two instead of one is simple. All matters of unchanging data, as births, marriages, deaths, pastoral and statistical record, are in—

The Historical Record of Permanent Data. Book 1. This record should be in every church, as it contains matters of historical and permanent value, and might easily last a church a hundred years. The record contains pages for the Historical Record, Record of Pastors, Record of Official Members, Statistical Records, Benevolence Record, Record of Baptisms, Record of Marriages, and Record of Deaths.

Size, 9x6 inches. Indexed A-Z. *$3.25.

The membership itself is to be found in a separate volume—THE PERMANENT MEMBERSHIP ROLL. Book No. 2 is in the modern form of an entire page for each family. Where membership is constantly changing such a Roll has to be rewritten in a new book every few years. To avoid this the PERMANENT MEMBERSHIP ROLL has also been issued in Loose-Leaf form. With the Loose-Leaf, "removals" can be slipped out, and reinstated, for preservation in the back. If in time the book becomes too bulky, a separate binder can be secured for the "removals." Here again, in case of verification, the complete membership of a generation may be in a single volume—making the identification of a person's membership a simple matter.

Permanent Membership Roll. Book 2. This record is arranged by families, a page for each family. The book contains necessary blank pages to record the name of the Head of Family, Occupation, Business Address, Family Name, Christian Name, When Received, How Received, If by Certificate, from Where? Received by, How, Where, and When Removed, Acknowledged, others in family who are Baptized Children or Preparatory Members, Exact Birthday if under 21, Date of Baptism, Church Day School, or Bl. Church Class, Sunday School, How Disposed of, etc. Size, 9x6 inches. Indexed A–Z.

The card contains blank space to record the necessary information desired for a complete family record of church members and non-members. No. 8. Chart of Biblical and Contemporary Chronology, beginning with 1040 B. C., about the time of Saul's accession to the throne. It gives a conspectus of the Hebrew Kingdom, of Egypt, Assyria, and Damascus, of the captivity, of the entrance of Babylonia and Persia on the scene in the 6th and 7th centuries before Christ, and of Greece with its historic epochs, Macedonia and the conquest of Alexander, finally Rome, the Republic and Empire, to the time of the destruction of Jerusalem in the year 70. It incorporates the results of the most recent discoveries and the original investigations of the authors. Price, *$3.00.

Cylindrical Roller Cases. A New Invention. The sheets are mounted on spring (Hartshorne) rollers, in a light steel tube. The map is rolled securely within the tube when not in use and kept from dust and injury. This invention does away with the clumsy wooden map cabinet, and is far more convenient, durable, and portable. The complete set mounted on spring rollers and inclosed in the steel tubes, can be obtained as follows:

No. 1. *$6.00.
No. 2. *$5.50.

Historical Maps for Bible Classes. Consist of seven maps, size, 17x25 inches, mounted conveniently on a small metal tripod which can be easily shifted from place to place, and can be used where no wall space is available. The maps are a revised and condensed edition of the Historical Maps for Bible Students (wall maps), edited by PROFESSOR CHARLES FOSTER KENT, PH.D., of Yale University, and ALBERT ALONZO MADSEN, PH.D. The aim has been to condense all the matter in that series (except the topographical and chronological chart) in a lesser number of maps, thus reducing the size of the sheet without a proportional reduction in the size of the maps. Price, complete, *$7.50.

These maps are also sold separately. Price, each, *$1.50.

No. 1 in the series is a map of the Sinaitic Peninsula, with Palestine to the north and a portion of the Nile and its delta to the southwest. It illustrates the period of the Exodus and of the wanderings of the Israelites in the wilderness.

No. 2 pictures Palestine as it was during the period when the Israelites were finding permanent homes in eastern and western Palestine. It is a well-known and now generally accepted fact that the Hebrew conquest of Palestine was gradual and at first only partial.

No. 3 represents conditions in Palestine during the period of the United Hebrew kingdom. It is an indispensable geographical guide in the study of the books of Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles. It also includes a plan of Solomon's temple.

Historical Maps for Bible Classes—(C't'd).

No. 4 presents a picture of conditions in Palestine after the exile and during the days of the restored Jewish community and of the later Maccabean Kingdom. This map is especially useful in the study of the books of Ezra, Nehemiah, and the extra-canonical books of 1 and 2 Maccabees.

No. 5 presents Palestine in the time of Christ, and illustrates the gospel stories. New Testament names are brought out with special prominence. A plan of Jerusalem in the time of Christ and of Herod's temple complete the equipment for the study of this all-important period.

No. 6 presents the great Roman empire during the first Christian century, and illustrates the journeys of Saint Paul. Its great value is for the study of the Acts and the Epistles, and of the early missionary activity of the Church.

No. 7 contains the lands of the ancient civilized world, including the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates, the Syrian coast, and a portion of the Nile valley. All important names of towns and districts are here found.

The Right Books for Boys and Girls

First of all, the proper books for boys and girls to read are clean books, and written by authors who understand the hearts of the young. Such books should be written in good English, they should be absorbing in interest, wholesome and full of action. Further than this, they should carry a strong message—a message that will leave an indelible impression in the minds of the young readers, well on into manhood and womanhood.

REMEMBER: That price does not necessarily make the book. Price is a manufacturer's problem, having nothing to do with the quality of the story. If a publisher can produce a book at a less cost than can his competitor, he can afford to sell it at a lower figure.

That because a book bears a high price mark it is not necessarily a suitable book for children to read.

That, though the story may be printed on high grade paper, bound in expensive covers, and selling at a high price, it may be "poison," but it isn't cheap.

That many a classic is found in inexpensive covers.

Buyers of books for boys and girls are coming more and more to realize that the Altemus books for the young, while entertaining and instructive, come nearer to realizing the ideal of proper books for children to read than do most of the $1.50 and $2.00 books so alluringly put forth by the higher priced publishers.

Give the children a chance. Growing minds need proper nourishment.

A home without books is like a house without windows.

A book given to a child is a good investment.

Have your children started their library yet?

Have your children an empty bookcase?

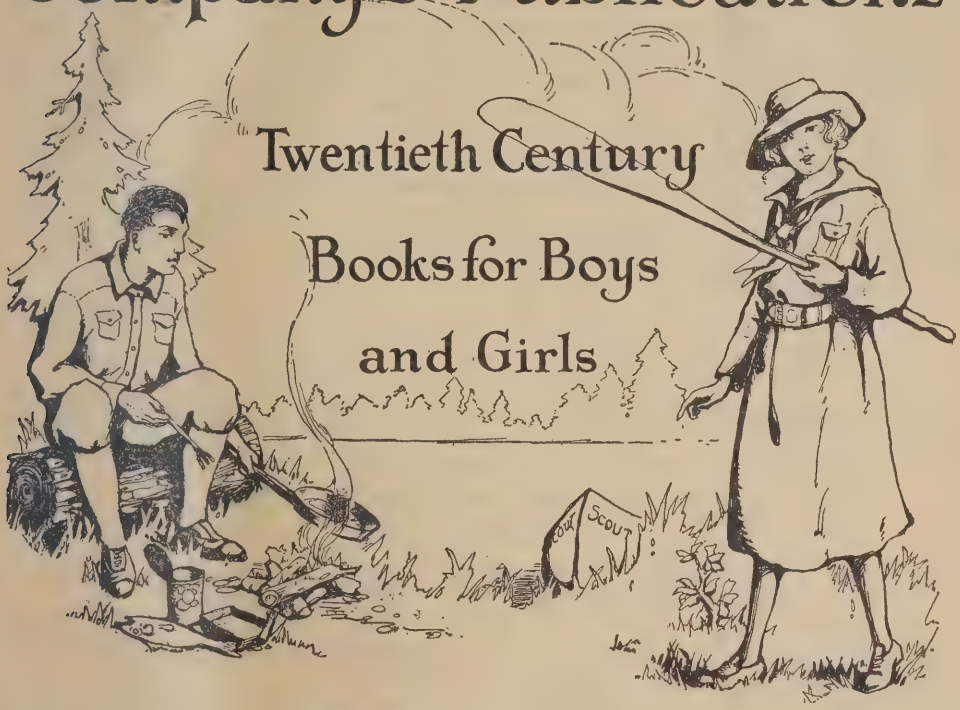
Select the right books for your children, or they may select the wrong books for themselves.

Lincoln's whole life and character was moulded by the books he read—start your children right!

What does your boy do after supper?

Start the children's bookshelf right with Altemus books.

Henry Altemus Company's Publications



"As boys of the age for which H. Irving Hancock writes are not given to poring over book reviews it is safe to say anything we like about 'Dave Darrin on Mediterranean Service' and 'Uncle Sam's Boys Smash the Germans.' Let us confess that we knew nothing about Mr. Hancock and were inclined to feel scornful of his books until we approached a nephew of seventeen. This youth, who was on the point of entering the Royal Air Force and is now about to enter college, advanced the facts that the Hancock books are fine, all of them—perfectly splendid stories of adventure; that every boy reads them, and that he would be glad to look over the two in question.

"At the end of the second day we unearthed the entranced youth from his easy chair and wrenched them from him. Since that time we have read the books, both of them, and discovered them to be books of clean-cut, double-quick adventure. It has also been discovered that Mr. Hancock is the author of ten series of these gayly moving stories, and that the young male of the species trembles with joy at mention of his name."—The New York Sun.

The Grammar School Boys Series

By H. IRVING HANCOCK

Small wonder the books of this series have made such a hit with the boys of America, for they are full of the life and spirit of youth. There were no quiet or dull moments for any one at Gridley when Dick & Co. were about. In athletics, in schoolboy fun, as well as in scholarship, they were always to be found in the forefront of things, and it was at this school that the foundations were laid for their later brilliant success in the world. Dick Prescott, Dave Darrin, Tom Reade and the other members of Dick & Co. are known wherever books are read. No library is complete without a full set of these books.

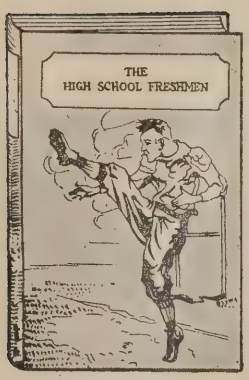
The High School Boys Series



By H. IRVING HANCOCK

There are several good reasons why thousands of the youth of the country are reading of the exploits of Dick & Co. Perhaps the real reasons are that, loving fair play and pluck, as every American lad does, he finds in Dick & Co. a reflection of his own manliness and patriotism. These intensely American lads lead the vanguard in scholarship as well as in athletic activity, and the breezy and vigorous spirit of outdoor life permeates the entire series. Every boy is bound to be a better man in mind and body for having made the acquaintance of the High School Boys. Bright, sprightly and absorbing in interest, without a dull page in the series.

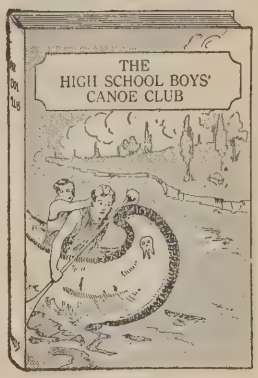
High School Boys' Vacation Series

By H. IRVING HANCOCK



"Give us more Dick Prescott books!"

This has been the cry from young readers the country over. The pressure had to be accommodated. So Mr. Hancock has written another series setting forth other adventures of Dick & Co. under the title of "The High School Boys' Vacation Series." These books deal with only the manliest phases of boyish life. Outdoor sports are the keynote of these volumes. Four wonderful books they are, and any boy who has started the first must immediately become possessed of the entire set—or he can't be happy! Boys will alternately thrill and chuckle over these splendid narratives.

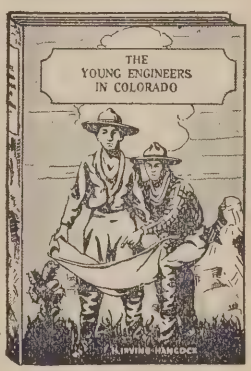
The Young Engineers' Series

By H. IRVING HANCOCK



Graduating from Gridley High School, Tom Reade and Harry Hazelton have gone West, and connected themselves with a firm of civil engineers. Filled with enthusiasm, with resourcefulness, and an indomitable determination to overcome all obstacles, they meet every requirement with pick, shovel, and pluck; and proved themselves worthy of all the traditions of "Dick & Co." Rousing stories of the boundless prairies; of life and work; of real people, and of actual happenings. The boy who starts reading one of these graphic stories will never leave it until the book is finished.

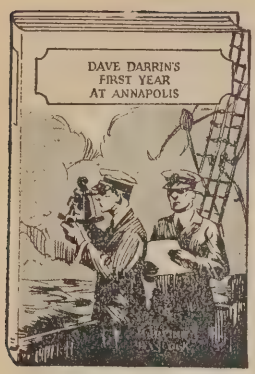
Altemus' Annapolis Series



By H. IRVING HANCOCK

The spirit of the new navy is delightfully and truthfully depicted in these volumes. Dave Darrin and Dan Dalzell secure appointment in the U. S. Naval Academy and after four years graduate as ensigns, and cruise around the world on a battleship. Both young men prove their mettle and give high promise of what may be expected of them in the great conflict that is, even at that moment, hovering over the world. Rollicking good stories; full of incident, adventure, and excellent descriptions. These volumes are certain to inculcate a genuine spirit of patriotism and should have a place in every school library.

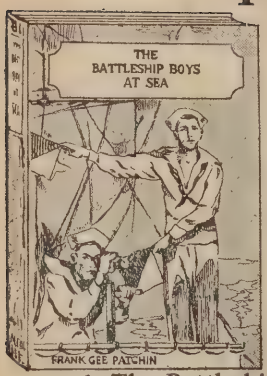
The Battleship Boys Series



By FRANK GEE PATCHIN

Inspiring adventure, moving incidents over the seven seas, and in the air above them; fighting the Huns from the decks of sinking ships, and coming to grief above the clouds; strange peoples and still stranger experiences, are some of the things that the readers of this series will live when they cruise with Dan Davis and Sam Hickey. Mr. Patchin has lived every phase of the life he writes about, and his stories truly depict life in the various branches of the navy—stories that glow with the spirit of patriotism that has made the American navy what it proved itself to be in the world war.

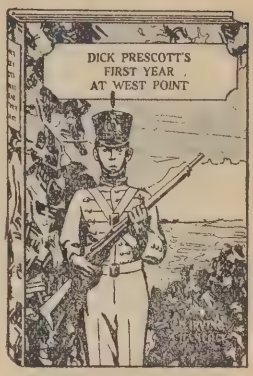
Altemus' West Point Series

By H. IRVING HANCOCK



The author is professedly an enthusiast over the military service, yet he never allows his enthusiasm to cloud his judgment. Mr. Hancock has lived with the Army a good deal since 1890, and accompanied the troops as a war correspondent on both the Cuban and the Philippine campaigns. He has lived in the field for months at a time with the troops on active service. His principal characters, in these narratives, are two sound, wholesome, manly young Americans who go strenuously and laboriously through their four years of cadetship. These two cadets are not human wonders, but a pair of average bright American boys, who have a hard enough time in working their way through the Academy to commissions in the United States Army. Their doings will prove an inspiration to all other American boys.

1. Dick Prescott's First Year at West Point; Or, Two Chums in the Cadet Gray.
2. Dick Prescott's Second Year at West Point; Or, Finding the Glory of the Soldier's Life.
3. Dick Prescott's Third Year at West Point; Or, Standing Firm for Flag and Honor.

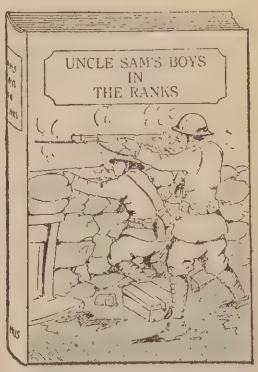
The Boys of the Army Series

By H. IRVING HANCOCK



These stimulating stories are among the best of their class that have ever been written. They breathe the life and spirit of our army of today, and in which Uncle Sam's Boys fought with a courage and devotion excelled by none in the world war. There is no better way to instil patriotism in the coming generation than by placing in the hands of juvenile readers books in which a romantic atmosphere is thrown around the boys of the army with thrilling plots that boys love. The books of this series tell in story form the life of a soldier from the rookie stage until he has qualified for an officer's commission, and, among other things, present a true picture of the desperate days in fighting the Huns.

Altemus' Dave Darrin Series

By H. IRVING HANCOCK

The United States Navy played a heroic part in winning the great world war, and so did Dave Darrin and Dan Dalzell, than whom no more efficient officers ever paced the bridge of a man-o'-war. These two young officers were well equipped to meet the tremendous responsibilities that were placed upon their shoulders when America went to war with the Hun. In the last two volumes of this popular series are chronicled the experiences of Dave and Dan in the great world conflict. These books show what life in various phases of the naval service really is.

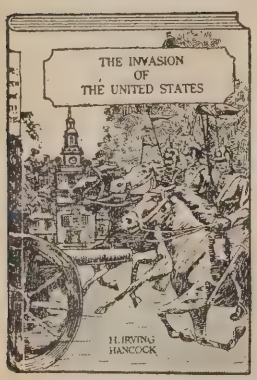
The Conquest of the United States Series



By H. IRVING HANCOCK

If the United States had not entered the war as she did, had our Marines failed to stay the Huns in their drive for Paris, had Germany won the war, many things might have happened to America, and this series by Mr. Hancock brings the possibilities of such a situation home to us in a way that makes all who read these remarkable books pause in sober thought. Acknowledged to be among the most unusual and fascinating juvenile books that have been produced—books that bring with them a queer thrill when one considers what easily might have happened. No liberty-loving American boy can afford to miss reading any of these books.

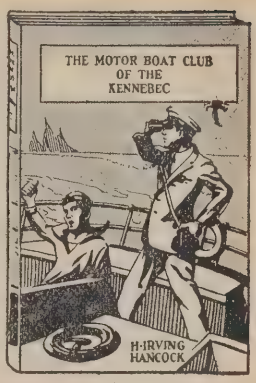
By H. IRVING HANCOCK



Bright and sparkling as the waters over which the Motor Boat Boys sail. Manliness and pluck are reflected on every page; the plots are ingenious, the action swift, and the interest always tense. Half-a-Dozen Housekeepers

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

If anyone writes better stories for girls than Mrs. Wiggin we don't know who it is; and if there is a better story of its kind than this, or one containing more vivacious girls or delightful old maids, it would be a joy to have the pleasure of reading it. The recitation hall of the Wareham Female Seminary having been burned to the ground, Miss Bell Winship invites five of her seminary mates to go over to the cottage of her parents, left empty for the season, to keep house together for a fortnight. The plan is accepted. The six school-girls "descend" upon the little Maine village, and what they found to do is told with a fascination that is remorseless.

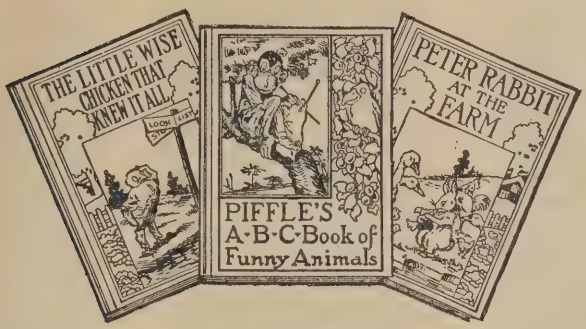
Wee Books for Wee Folks



This is to be an appreciation—unsolicited and unexpected—by this department of the Henry Altemus Company. This company has sent to the reviewer a generous number of the most delightful books that are published for very little people—Wee Books for Wee Folks. This is not "blurb" for the publishers or by them. It is a sober statement of a fact. No other books are made for the tiny child which can compare with them in attractiveness. All the old nursery favorites are included: "The Story of the Three Bears," "Red Riding Hood," "The Little Red Hen"—all that are woven into the fabric and tissue of childhood.

In addition there are new favorites which are being added every year. Peter Rabbit with all his various adventures has a large place among these. Charming little modern tales appear also. But it is the format of these books, as well as their contents, which so delights the children. Just big enough for little hands to hold comfortably; printed in clear, big print for the toddler who is beginning to wrestle with "lessons"; every single printed page faced by an illustration in bright colors—it is no wonder that these books are hugged to their owners' hearts all day and tucked under small pillows at night.

DOZENS OF INQUIRIES

These review copies have resulted in dozens of inquiries as to where they can be obtained. In one week two inquiries came to this department for information about them, one from Mexico and one from Porto Rico. The Mexican child has been so grief-stricken at being torn from his precious book that the mother in despair wrote to find where she could obtain more of the series. The Porto Rican had read of them in these columns and wished some for her children.

Loving care and understanding of children have gone into the preparation of these books. I cannot perform a friendlier service to mothers than to recommend them. Their very moderate cost makes them possible to every purse.

—Louise Platt Hauck in The News-Press.

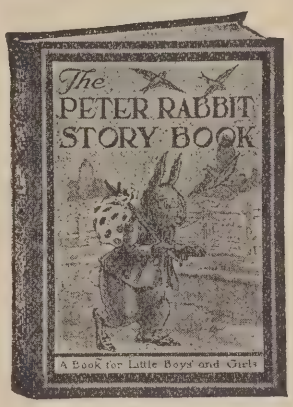
The Peter Rabbit Story Book

For Little Boys and Girls



"I wish the publishers of 'The Peter Rabbit Story Book' could have heard the pretty tribute which was paid to this volume in my presence not long ago." It was in the children's ward of a hospital. Several tiny convalescents were listening to stories read to them from this book. "Oh! yes," the nurse told me in answer to a question, "the children love 'The Peter Rabbit Story Book' because the stories are told in such simple words that the very youngest little tot can understand and enjoy them. I am glad whenever the opportunity occurs to praise this delightful book. It covers the difficult ground between 'being read aloud to' and 'reading for himself' with which every mother struggles. I know all the little two-year olds and three-year olds are going to be as happy as can be if they find a 'Peter Rabbit Story Book' among their birthday gifts or on Christmas morning."

Parents and others who may be in a quandary as to what might be a fitting gift to a small child can solve the problem satisfactorily by the presentation of this volume.

The young artist begins by drawing, in the picture selected, a straight line from dot No. 1 to dot No. 2, and thence proceeds in straight lines to numbers 3, 4, 5, and so on to the end of the numbers, when the figure to be reproduced is completed and assumes form and life. When the young artist has thus connected all the numbers he will be surprised at the amusing pictures of boys and girls and their frolics and escapades—and the picture books will be books of his own creating—and hence always treasured.

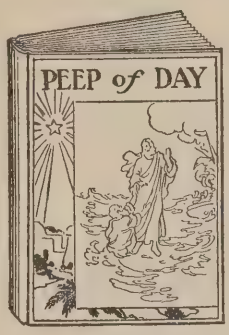
Altemus' Peep of Day Series

The design of these books is to lead children to understand and to delight in the Scriptures. If adults meet with difficulties in reading the sacred text, children meet with many more, which these books will clear up.



1. The Peep of Day. This volume gives a series of lessons in the Bible, in which the mysteries of the creation, salvation, the life and ministry of Christ, and other vital truths are made plain. It is written in very simple language so that small children may understand it. Numerous beautiful poems add to the interest of the book.

2. Line Upon Line. This book of Bible stories written especially for children begins with the creation of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, and follows the history of the patriarchs down to the stories of Joseph, Moses and Joshua. These are most interesting portions of Old Testament history. The book will be valuable for parents or teachers to read to small children, and older ones will find it interesting also.

3. Precept Upon Precept. No life in human history charms children like the life of Christ. It is delightful to witness the deep interest which children take in His teachings and in the incidents of His earthly life. One finds it easy to believe God has implanted in the infant heart a desire to hear and know Jesus. In this little book there have been gathered from the Gospels seventy-three incidents retold in simple story form, which are particularly appropriate for young people.

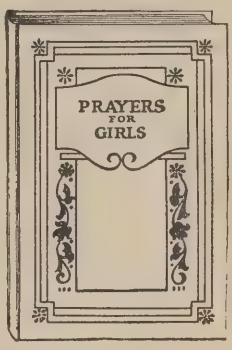
Prayers for Girls

By ELISABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL



It is with the ideal of helping a girl to face life with God, and to teach her to give true expression to her devotion, that this book is sent out upon its mission. It enters into the inner sanctuary of the girl's heart, and enables her to give utterance to longings and hopes, which heretofore she may have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the book's range and the depth of its understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our Churches. We have long needed just such a book as this.

"After childhood prayers have been learned, then the Lord's Prayer, the average parent feels that instruction in prayer has been finished, and the child is sent out to face life's daily problems with rather a vague knowledge of its devotional life. No provision is made for meeting the longings, the heartaches, even disappointments, which always will come to the "wings of youth." But this book shows that God's wisdom is needed at all times, and that He, especially, cares to have our trials brought to Him as to a confidant or constant friend."
—Reformed Church Messenger.

"The modern parents oppressed with the responsibility of drawing their daughters along the path of their best advantage could make no mistake by putting this volume in their hands. Its possibilities are very great."—Cleveland Topics.

"If the twentieth century girl is interested in the ancient and universal practice of prayer, and through its disuse in the home and school has forgotten the language, she cannot do better than avail herself of the splendid instruction offered in this volume."—The Christian-Evangelist.

"In religious education one of the greatest needs of today is training in the practice of prayer for our young people. Here is a book that meets the needs of private prayer for our girls."—Boston Evening Transcript.

"The prayers in this book are all simple and direct, and they are practically all for things that a normal girl ought to desire. We think it is a helpful book to put in the hands of girls."—Baptist Advance.

"Many mothers and others will welcome this most valuable book. The language is simple and natural and the prayers show depth of understanding of girl nature and its needs."—The Living Message.

"The study and use of these prayers will enlarge the life of any girl, and is a suitable gift for a Christian Endeavorer or Sunday school pupil."—The Watchword.

"This purple-bound, gold-stamped book will be a dainty treasured boon to many a sweet Christian girl."—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Prayers for Boys

By HERBERT C. ALLEMAN

"The very appearance of this book is attractive and its size is such as would enable a boy either to put it in his pocket or pack it in his kit when traveling. The prayers are not long, but are sufficient in their thought and suggestiveness to cover the occasion. They are not formal, but they breathe the spirit of true religion. There is an element of frankness and sincerity about them such as will appeal to every boy.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"These prayers are simple Anglo-Saxon in language, virile in expression, varied in range, personal in approach, and admirably printed. Many boys will be glad of prayers to use "before the game" or after it; "in failure;" and "on a tramp." The book could well be adapted for services for young people and safely given to confirmation candidates of all kinds."—Church Missionary Review.

"This book, while not intended as a substitute for their own words, will help boys to express in boy language what is in their own minds. Boys, anyhow, have thoughts sometimes very profound and which they find hard to express, and the prayers in this book have been prepared with a view to helping boys give expression to what are very sincere longings for the higher things in their lives."—Evangelical Messenger.

"Even the non-liturgical churches are realizing the need and the value of written prayers, especially for boys and girls. Children need to be taught in the school of prayer. The prayers in this book are simple, reverent, natural and usable. Boys will be helped to express exactly what is in their own minds and hearts. It is not meant as a substitute for the extempore prayer, but for aid and assistance in prayer."—Boston Evening Transcript.

"The prayers are not intended as substitutes for praying, but as an encouragement to put prayers in your own words. They are well worth memorizing and will be of great value in the devotional life of young people."—The Presbyterian Advance.

"A beautiful volume of devout and earnest prayers, intended for the use of boys. Those boys, and older persons also, who find comfort in set forms of prayer, will be able to get real help from this book."—The Hartford Daily Courant.

Gertrude Smith's Bible Stories

Baby Bible Stories Robbie's Bible Stories
Bed Time Bible Stories for Little Children

"After all the stories written for children have been passed in review and tested, it still remains true that there are no stories equal to those told in the Bible. And when these stories are retold, with sympathetic appreciation and adaptation to the child mind, as in Gertrude Smith's pretty books, there will be no lack of interest on the part of those who read or hear them. Give the children such stories as these to brighten and bless the evening hours and to make the bedtime an undying happy memory."—From report of the "Congress of Mothers" at Washington, D. C.

Delight

By GERTRUDE SMITH

The story of "Delight" begins two years after she had been given her new name by her "Aunt Constance," a childless widow who had taken her from a Children's Home in Boston to her country place. Before that, "Delight" was a poor little lame thing, very "wobblety and achey," named "Ennie." She is taught by "Aunt Constance" to live up to her new name "Delight," and to know that God is Love, and that with absolute faith He will cure her completely. He does. The joy of "Delight" and her friends is made complete when her "Aunt" at last makes the child her very own "legal little girl."

The Greatest Thing in the World

BY HENRY DRUMMOND

The author of this remarkable address was born in Scotland in 1851, and studied for the University of Edinborough in private schools in his native city of Stirling, Scotland. He early gave signs of special promise, and it was decided that he should enter on the career of the ministry; and after his ordination he was appointed to a mission station at Malta. It was in the leisure of that rather solitary work that he was enabled to find time to turn his thoughts more entirely to the subject he has since treated in lectures and books, although it was not until long afterward that these efforts were made public.

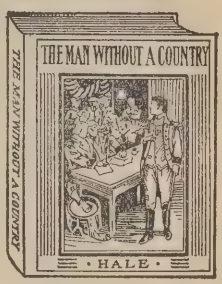
The Man Without a Country

By EDWARD EVERETT HALE

Edited with Introduction and Notes

By Norris H. Laughton, A.B., A.M. (Harvard)



He who has never read this masterpiece has still a valuable work before him. From the first sentence to the last the author holds the reader's interest, and when we have laid the book aside our only regret is that there is no more left for us to read. No American can consider himself well versed in patriotic literature unless he is acquainted with this piece of our national literary wealth. Every home, library and school should possess this book, and no student, business man or woman should leave it unread.

Two Years Before the Mast

By RICHARD HENRY DANA

Richard Henry Dana, the author of "Two Years Before the Mast," while at Harvard University, which he entered in 1831, became troubled with an affection of the eyes that prevented him from continuing his studies. He therefore determined to see what an entire change of life would do towards curing his malady, and with this end in view he shipped as an ordinary seaman on board a sailing vessel bound for California. He was away just over two years, returning in September, 1836, being then in his twenty-first year. His book, which was published in 1840, is distinguished by its vivid descriptions of life at sea in the early days of the American mercantile marine.

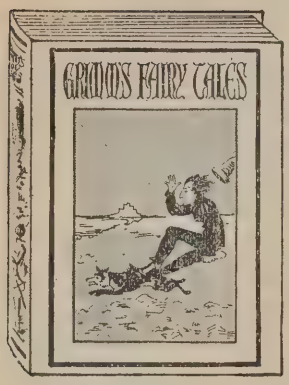
Grimm's Fairy Tales



The Brothers Grimm, Jacob Ludwig Carl and Wilhelm Carl, are famous wherever books are read, and especially as the joint authors of Grimm's Fairy Tales. The lives of these two brothers were so bound up together that they scarcely ever separated. They worked, ate and lived together until 1850, when Wilhelm, always delicate, died. Their father was a lawyer, and early the tastes of both young men, though they too had studied law, turned to literature. Jacob became superintendent of the library of Jerome Bonaparte, king of Westphalia, while Wilhelm received an appointment in the Cassel Library. While thus engaged the brothers collected all the popular fairy tales they could find, partly from the mouths of people, partly from books, and in 1812–15 published the famous stories known as Grimm's Fairy Tales. Jacob having resisted the unconstitutional encroachments of the king of Hanover was banished, and Wilhelm shared his banishment. Jacob was called to Berlin as professor and member of the Academy of Sciences, and there they lived until the death of Wilhelm. Grimm's Grammar was another of the books produced by these famous brothers. Jacob died in 1863.

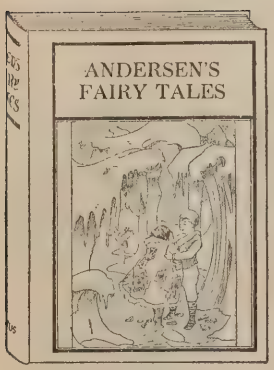
Andersen's Fairy Tales

By HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN



The author of "Andersen's Fairy Tales," a Dane, born in 1805, was a poet as well as a story teller. He began life in most humble circumstances and learned to read and write in a charity school, where he was placed at the age of nine, and, at the same time, was obliged to work in a factory after school hours to help support his widowed mother. Even then his imagination began to work and he wrote many stories, none of which were published, but which brought him to the attention of Councillor Collin, who got the boy into a government school, thence to a university. Soon thereafter his writings began to attract attention, and in 1853 there appeared the first volumes of his "Fairy Tales," which became the most popular of all his works. They were translated into many tongues, and to-day are as popular as when first offered to the public.

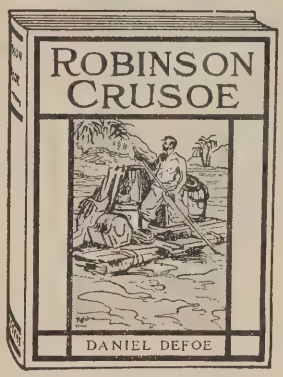
Robinson Crusoe

By DANIEL DEFOE



Like John Bunyan, Daniel Defoe, an English author who was born in 1659 in the suburbs of London, had the misfortune to get into jail. With Bunyan the sentence was for preaching; with Defoe it was for writing a satire entitled "The Mock Mourners." For this he was condemned to pay a fine, to be pilloried three times, and to be imprisoned indefinitely. While serving out his sentence he wrote to while away the time. It was, however, his later work, that immortal story, "The Life and Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," that made him famous. This story was founded on Dempier's "Voyage Around the World," and on Alexander Selkirk's adventures which were related to him by the adventurer. Crusoe's shipwreck and adventures, his finding the footprint in the sand—the whole atmosphere which surrounds the situation—have made Defoe's work an imperishable part of English literature.

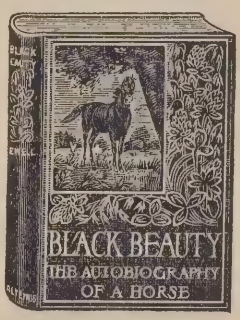
Black Beauty

By ANNA SEWELL



This world-famous book has been called the "Uncle Tom's Cabin of the Equine World," but the pathetic history of its author has few parallels in literature. It is the story of the horse written by a woman who loved horses, who, in a humble home in Yarmouth, England, a cripple for life, wrote this enduring story from her invalid couch. She spent five years in the writing of the book, that has been translated into many languages, that is used in schools in many lands to teach the young kindness to that faithful animal the Horse. This volume was a real gift to the world, and soon after its production Miss Sewell died without reaping the benefits from her great humane effort. The keynote of the story is happiness, which it radiates from every line, and no one reading it can help being a better human and possessing a better appreciation of the noble animal so closely associated with our daily life and activities.

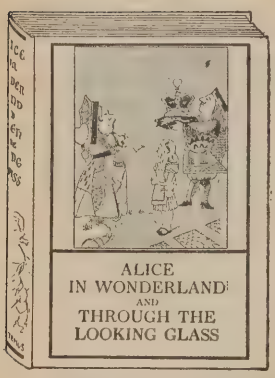
Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass

By LEWIS CARROLL

Illustrated by Sir John Tenniel



Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, better known under the pen name of Lewis Carroll, was an English author, known also as a mathematician and lecturer on mathematics. He was born in 1833 and lived until 1898. He devoted himself to his mathematical studies, writing at the same time, but attracting little attention to himself in the literary world until the year 1865, when he wrote "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," which almost immediately brought him fame. This story has found appreciation, not only with the young, but with those of riper years as well. Equally delightful proved the story following, which was written as a sequel in 1871. This story, "Through the Looking Glass," related the further adventures of Alice, and has been fully as widely read as "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland." Both of these popular stories are here offered in one volume. No more charming or fascinating stories have ever been written.

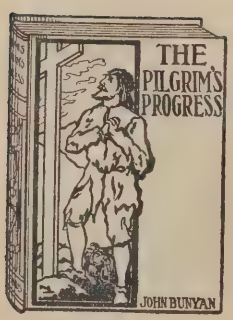
The Pilgrim's Progress

By JOHN BUNYAN



The author of "Pilgrim's Progress" was born in a small town in England in 1628, the son of a tinker. He grew up a morose lad, gifted with an imagination and a sensibility that almost amounted to a disease. At times he was filled with remorse and despair over his own fancied shortcomings, and devoted hours of every day to study of the Bible. He first took up writing as an occupation, then became a preacher, but his preaching was not fully appreciated and he was thrown into jail because he persisted in preaching his doctrines, and remained there for twelve years, though frequently offered his liberty if he would promise to preach no more. It was while in jail that he wrote "The Pilgrim's Progress," a book probably more widely known and read than any other book in the world, except the Bible. This famous book possesses a charm which gratifies the imagination of the reader with all the action and scenery of a fairy tale, and untold thousands of children have gazed with mingled feelings of fear and delight on the pictures representing Christian thrusting his sword into Apollyon or writhing in the grasp of Giant Despair.

A Child's Garden of Verses

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

The appeal that Stevenson has made to the more mature readers of the world finds a counterpart in his appeal to the children. Nothing has ever so won the hearts of the great mass of American children as has Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses," probably the most delightful collection of verses for the young to be found in the world's literature. Its charm is felt by every boy and girl reader of this book, a volume of verse that has touched the deepest chords in human emotion.

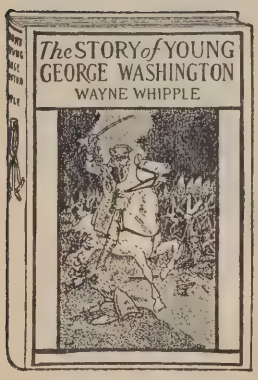
The Story of Young George Washington

By WAYNE WHIPPLE



In all that has been written about George Washington, his youth has never been treated as an adventure story, though he had a thrilling career, even as a boy. We are sure, therefore, that readers will find "The Story of Young George Washington" unusually interesting, if not, in some respects, a surprise.

Thanks to Mr. Mason L. Weems and others who tried to make their hero a demigod, people in general have the notion that the Father of His Country was a pompous, pedantic sort of character with a mixture of ichor and ice-water coursing in his veins.

Instead of that, he was a real boy and a great-hearted manly man, the stand-by of his mother, a poor widow, without school advantages, and looked down upon by the "F. F. V.'s" because he earned his own living—his first battle for independence.

He was more like Lincoln than many suppose, having a broad sense of humor—sometimes laughing till he lay in a helpless heap, and often till the tears ran down his cheeks.

The newspapers have poked fun at the so-called "discovery" of Washington's humor, comparing Mr. Whipple, the author of the book, to Columbus and Galileo—and even to Edison, as if it were all an invention! Yet the same papers have called the man of this book "the flesh-and-blood Washington," and the history professor of a great university surprised Mr. Whipple one day in the street by saying, "You have created a new Washington."

He had to reply that he had "tried only to reproduce the real Washington,"—who was neither a prig nor a snob, but the great, kindly, generous, warm-hearted man we can all love as well as revere. To show him as he really was—to young folks especially—is an endeavor in patriotism.

This book should find a place in every home where books are part of the daily life. Stories like these cannot be read too often by young people.

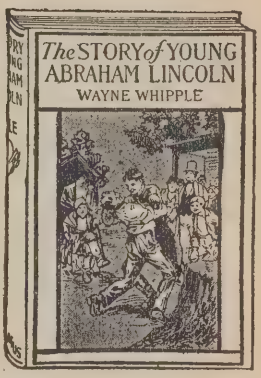
The Story of Young Abraham Lincoln

By WAYNE WHIPPLE



While he was a fellow-guest, with Robert Todd Lincoln, Ambassador Bryce, and other honored personages, at Lincoln's old home in Springfield, Illinois, during the great Lincoln Centennial celebration, the author of this book was enabled to meet a number of friends and relatives of Abraham Lincoln, and secure from them many new "Lincoln Stories," and much good material which had never been put in print before.

With these signal advantages he made such good use of the new data thus secured, that Abraham Lincoln's only surviving son, Robert T. Lincoln, remarked about a certain intimate matter which took place in the White House in 1862:

"I don't remember that, Mr. Whipple."

"Of course not," the author replied, "for you were in Harvard at that time."

"So I was, so I was," said Mr. Lincoln, laughing. "I believe you know more about our family matters than I do myself."

After reading something Mr. Whipple had just published about his father, Robert T. Lincoln wrote to him:

"You are putting the people nearer to the heart of Abraham Lincoln than any other writer."

All these new materials have been fused together by the author's intimate heart-knowledge, and poured, warm and throbbing, into "The Story of Young Abraham Lincoln," and these fresh and fascinating features make the book well worth reading.

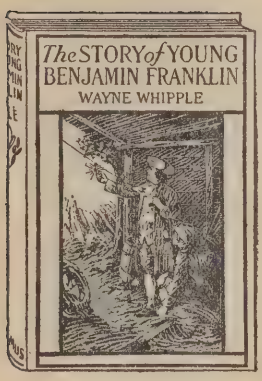
The Story of Young Benjamin Franklin

By WAYNE WHIPPLE



Benjamin Franklin "was born and bred in obscurity" (the words are his own) in Boston, and was the fifteenth child of his father. His schooling was limited to the common English branches, and he was placed, at the age of ten, in the shop of his father, a tallow-chandler, and set "at cutting wicks for the candles, filling moulds for cast candles, attending the shop, going of errands, etc." The occupation was distasteful, so he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a printer of an older brother, who had a printing-office in Boston. This employment brought him into communication with books, and he spent his hours after his day's work in reading whatever he could find that suited his tastes.

He did not get on pleasantly with his brother, so when seventeen he went to Philadelphia. Here he found employment as a printer. Meeting with encouragement, he determined, when about twenty-one years of age, to open a printing-office on his own account, and went to London to procure the type and other materials. Not being able to effect the purchase, he remained nearly two years in London, practising his trade as a printer.

Franklin held various important public offices, and was one of the leaders of public opinion in the controversies between the Colonies and the mother country. He was a prominent member of the Continental Congress, and was one of a committee of five to draft the Declaration of Independence; and, finally, he was a delegate to the Convention by which the Constitution of the United States was drafted, after the war was over. He would have been elected Vice-President with Washington but for his advanced years.

Mr. Whipple's story is an intimate history of the wonderful boy who became the greatest of Americans; and shows in an inspiring way how a poor boy without friends or money forged his way into international prominence. Stories like these cannot be read too often.

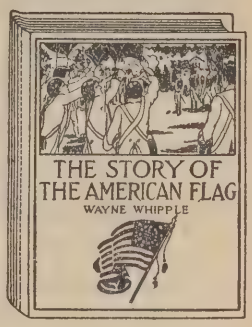
The Story of the American Flag

By WAYNE WHIPPLE

THE FLAG OF COLUMBUS



Here is the flag of Columbus—the first ever raised above American soil. Do you know what the design symbolizes? What was the flag carried by Cortez—still preserved in the National Museum at Mexico? What was the flag of the Puritans? Of Capt. John Smith? Why did Gov. Endicott cut the red cross out of the Massachusetts Colony flag? What was the flag designed by Franklin—the first ensign adopted by the Continental Congress?

These are but a few of the interesting questions answered by Wayne Whipple in his splendid book, "The Story of the American Flag," from the banner of Columbus to "Old Glory" of the present day.

Respect for the flag is the first lesson in patriotism. There is no better method of instilling such respect in the minds of small children than by giving them a better knowledge of the origin and development of that emblem to which they are so frequently called upon to profess allegiance—how it came into being, what it has stood for in the past, and its greater significance to-day. Here is material for many a story hour, every page alive with intense human interest, expressed in language which the youngest children can understand.

Here you will also find simple versions of The Boston Tea Party, The Stamp Act, Paul Revere's Ride, Battle of Lexington, and other historical events with which the flag is closely allied.

On every patriotic holiday you will find this book a welcome volume, for, in addition to the complete story of the flag, it contains a collection of songs, poems, addresses, drills and sayings about the Stars and Stripes, many of which are available from no other source; making the book especially adaptable for kindergarten and primary school exercises.

"The Story of the American Flag" is a well-printed book bound in durable cloth covers, with colored frontispiece, and many illustrations in black and white.

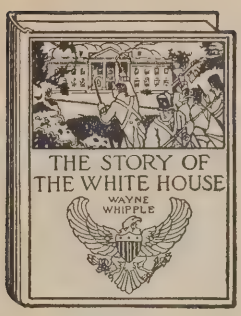
The Story of the White House

By WAYNE WHIPPLE



Is a bright, "meaty," gossipy history of the United States presented in the personal stories of the Presidents and their families, old and young, from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson. In telling how each of the twenty-eight Presidents "got there," Mr. Whipple has given many a vivid account of heroic struggle and of noble achievement. Over and above all the inspiring things you would naturally expect to find in a book about the First Home in the Land, this breezy history overflows with data which cannot be found in any other history or story.

Of all the unheard-of items in it, did you know:

That a peppery Scotch neighbor actually told Ex-President Washington that he (the Father of his Country!) would never have amounted to anything if he hadn't married a wealthy widow?

That the national capital was "a swamp in the woods" when President John Adams went to live in the White House, and that Mrs. Adams had the weekly washing hung up to dry in the East Room?

That the Quaker wife of "the great, little Madison," instead of leaving the White House to be burned in the War of 1812, declared that if she could have her way she would have the muzzle of a cannon pointing out of every window of the mansion?

That John Quincy Adams sent a solemn message demanding that Congress take immediate action because an irate editor had pulled the President's son and secretary's nose in the Rotunda of the Capitol?

That Andrew Jackson was so popular that he was mobbed by the people, who thronged the White House, stood in muddy boots on the new satin-covered chairs and sofas to get a chance to see their idol, and crowded him so that he "slept out" the first night he should have stayed in the Executive Mansion? Or what he said to Mrs. Alexander Hamilton when she served him the first ice-cream he ever ate?

How fresh-picked cherries and iced milk made Millard Fillmore President of the United States of America?

All these and scores of questions quite as strange and illuminating are answered in this patriotic and fascinating volume on the White House with its short history of our land and nation.

"The Story of the White House" is finely printed and bound in illuminated cloth covers, with frontispiece in colors, and profusely illustrated in black and white.

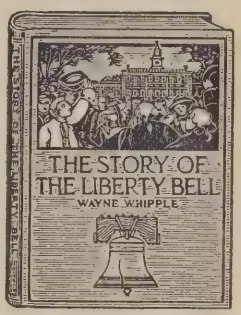
The Story of the Liberty Bell

By WAYNE WHIPPLE



Is a history of the great struggles in many lands, beginning with "An Ancient People's Dash for Liberty" over three thousand years ago.

Mr. Whipple leaps over "the Seven Seas" and across the centuries to find the most heroic, age-long struggles for freedom.

The tale of Erin's conflict is quaint and thrilling. The stories of brave little Switzerland's fightings with Austria and the final triumph through the heroism of William Tell and Arnold of Winkelried can never be anything but inspiring. Then the century-long struggles of the Vaudois or Waldenses. Then the Crusades, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," of Richard Lionheart and Saladin, will live through the ages as the epic of Christian heroism. The villain king of England follows his bravest of brothers, and the angry barons gather around John, Richard Lionheart's brother, like so many wolves showing their teeth to terrify the royal hyena and get their rights through the signing, sealing and delivering of one of the Four Great Documents of Liberty, the Magna Charta of England.

The three other great Documents of Democracy were signed in America. The "Compact" of the Pilgrim Fathers in the little stuffy cabin of the "Mayflower" came next. If any of those "grave and reverend signers" had ventured to laugh while signing that Document, he would have come near being pitched head foremost into the briny deep.

But at the signing of the third Parchment of Freedom—the Declaration of Independence—the Fathers of the Country laughed. "Now we must all hang together," said the President of the Congress in Independence Hall, as he wrote his "John Hancock"—"so that King George can see it without his spectacles!" Dr. Benjamin Franklin answered with a chuckle—"Hang together or we will all hang separately!" Though they well knew they would have to die for that if they did not win their freedom, those old heroes laughed. So American humor was born at the same time as American Independence—twins.

Of course there was humor at the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation—the fourth Document of Liberty, for Abraham Lincoln wrote that.

"The Story of the Liberty Bell" itself is strange and novel. The book is a thrilling story showing how the greatest heroes have been fighting and waiting for thousands of years—"to make the world safe for democracy."

Little Black Rabbit

By KENNETH GRAHAM DUFFIELD

This book mingles together the most original, wonderful and delightful nature stories that ever enthralled the minds of childhood. Those who recall the "Brer Rabbit" stories will agree with all that is claimed for these simple imaginative tales. The book is a treasure mine for parents to read to children.

Brer B'ar has lost the water from his well. So, "Li'l Black Rabbit hunt up de almanac what tells when it's de light of de moon, an' when it's de dark of de moon. An' he know ef you wants to fin' water when you dig a well you gotta dig in de light of de moon, kaze de water rise in de light of de moon an' fall in de dark of de moon."

Elsewhere in this jolly book, which has no word of suffering, or real wickedness in it, we are told of a noise in the poultry yard:—

"Up jump Billie Pink-Eye, an' off he put to see what makin' all de racket. In course, when Billie Pink-Eye start off, de res' of de family gotta go, too, de whole kit 'n' barrel of 'em. Dere wuz:

"Johnnie Jump-Up, he gotta go.

"An' Dottie Dimple-Nose, she gotta go.

"An' Timmie Tiny-Toes, he gotta go.

"An' Slim Jimmie, he gotta go.

"An' all de res' of de chillun, what wuz so new dey ain't got no names, dey gotta go.

"Bimeby back come Billie Pink-Eye jess a-prancin'. 'Oh, Black Rabbit! Come quick! Come a-runnin'!'

" 'What's all de trouble, Pink-Eye?' says Li'l Black Rabbit.

" 'You know Ole Dominecker Hen, what got all dem li'l chickens?'

" 'Uh-huh,' said Li'l Black Rabbit.

" 'Well, de hen what got all dem chickens, ain't got all dem chickens!' "

Which meant, as was further explained, "dat somebody done stole all dem thickens an' ain't nary one of 'em lef' nowhars!"—Montreal Family Herald & Weekly Star.

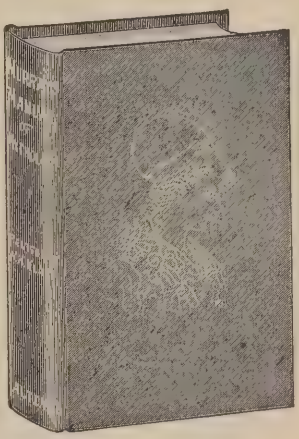
Manual of Mythology

By ALEXANDER C. MURRAY

Edited by W. H. Klapp



To the student or the casual reader of mythology, this volume is invaluable. No more helpful work on this subject ever has been written, and any person interested in the subject will find it both fascinating and informative, for it will teach him how to read and understand the mythologies of the early races of the world. The work treats clearly and comprehensively of the fables, legends, myths and traditions in the earliest periods of civilization. Though speculations on the origin of mythology have been put forth from a very early period, it is only in recent times, by comparing together the myths of different peoples, that any real advance has been made and the study of mythology placed upon a scientific basis. This has been done in the present volume.

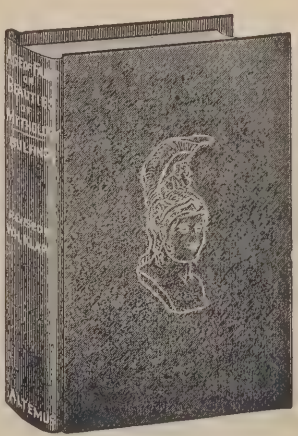
The Age of Fable; or, Beauties of Mythology

By THOMAS BULFINCH

Edited by W. H. Klapp



Out of the humdrum existence of a business life, Thomas Bulfinch developed into a writer of world-wide renown. This American author was born in Boston, Mass., in 1796, and died there in 1867. He graduated from Harvard in 1814 and then engaged in business, devoting his leisure hours to writing. His life was largely given up to mercantile pursuits, however, until 1837, when he became a clerk in the Merchants Bank of Boston. It was while so engaged that he wrote his enduring masterpiece, "The Age of Fable; or, The Beauties of Mythology." In this work he planned to popularize mythology, dealing with the various mythologies in their relations to each other. That he accomplished his ambition is evidenced by the fact that the "Age of Fable" still holds its place as the most popular work on the subject ever produced.

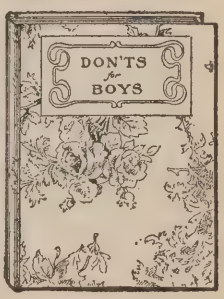
Don'ts for Boys

By AN OLD BOY



Boys, full of activity and vitality—in other words, "steam"—are perhaps more prone thoughtlessly to fall into error than are girls. It is to call their attention to the most common of these errors, and to point the way to correct them, that this volume has been written. Every lad will find it to his enduring advantage to follow the rules laid down in this volume which will lead him into a happier boyhood and a more manly and successful manhood. No more useful gift from parent to son could be selected, for it cannot but prove a distinctly helpful factor in moulding the boy's character.

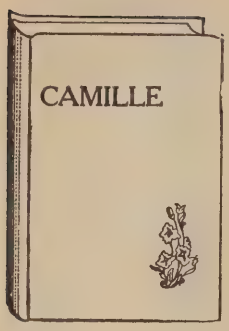
Camille

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS



"Camille" is a household word, and the story of Camille is one that has been read all over the world, a story that, in its dramatized form, has held the attention and stirred the emotions of untold thousands of theater-goers. Few volumes ever published have had a wider reading or have been more sympathetically received, and none, perhaps, is better known, for Camille has been read and discussed in many languages, and in most homes where books are loved and read. It is a touching story, full of human interest, dealing with human beings, drawn from lives that the author knew, a story that turns the spot-light on real human souls. The story of "Camille" is one that no person who has not yet read it should miss.

Carmen

By PROSPER MERIMEE

A romance laid in Seville, in the early part of the last century, that from the opening paragraph to the closing line will always have new charm and always find new hosts of readers. Its conspicuous quality is a richness of imagery, and a flare of color, joy and passion. This notable example of modern French literature shows the author's touch as that of the true craftsman holding fast to the best traditions of his art. "Carmen" was adapted for the operatic stage in 1875, and presented at the Opera Comique in Paris where it scored a success equal to that of the book itself.

The Ifs of History

By JOSEPH EDGAR CHAMBERLIN

"There is a book called 'The Ifs of History' that is well worth a couple of hours of anyone's time. It consists of twenty-two chapters designed to show upon what trifling circumstances the destinies of humanity have hinged.

What would have been the effect on history—

If Columbus had kept his straight course westward?

If the boy Washington had become a British midshipman?

If Lincoln's father had moved southward, not northward?

If the Confederates had marched on Washington after Bull Run?

These and other interesting questions are discussed in a fascinating manner in this book."—From Bruce Barton's editorial in The Red Book Magazine.

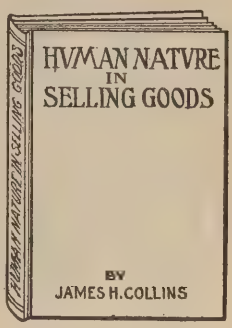
JAMES H. COLLINS' BOOKS

Human Nature in Selling Goods



This is a small book—you can slip it into your pocket—but it contains a great deal of practical selling philosophy, chiefly in the form of stories told by successful salesmen themselves to illustrate good methods. Many of the stories are about selling difficulties—hard customers, active competition and other obstacles that the salesman meets. And the stories tell how some flesh-and-blood salesmen actually went over the obstacle or straight through it. This little volume should be on the working book-shelf of every man or woman who sells goods on the road or behind a counter.

The Art of Handling Men

Some of the greatest teachers in history have always told a story when they wanted to make a point. That is Mr. Collins' method of making clear a subject like scientific management. Disregarding the technical terms he goes straight after the men who are doing the thing and gets them to explain it in terms of experience. Then he condenses the experience of a hundred men in stories that will help other fellows do that thing. This small volume shows how the game element may be introduced into work, how many labor difficulties disappear when jobs can be made steady, how the bonus wage idea has been humanized, how there is a right sort of welfare work and a wrong kind, and so on.

George Washington Jones

"A Christmas Gift That Went A-Begging"

By RUTH McENERY STUART

"George Washington Jones is as endearing a small specimen of 'cullud' humanity as one has met in fiction for many a year, and the history of his touching attempt to give himself away is told with a mingling of humor and pathos that is fairly disarming."—New York Evening Post.

Caleb Peaslee

By FRANK K. RICH

Another "David Harum"

Here is a novel of a sharply defined type which is actually super-excellent in its kind. In "Caleb Peaslee," shrewd, kindly, and full of a straightforward, homely wisdom which he is able to express in pungent and pithy phrase, Mr. Rich presents a figure able to stand beside "David Harum," and the racy Cape Codders of Joseph Lincoln; these heroes have now a living, flesh-and-blood brother. While "Caleb Peaslee" tells a consecutive story, and is a novel, not a mere sequence of character sketches, the chapters carry expository chapter headings which make the book ideal for occasional reading, indeed it is exactly the book to take up at odd moments, as the mood beckons. Characteristic chapter titles are—"Caleb Tells of a Horse Which Could Be Safely Left Unhaltered," "Caleb Discourses of Cookery, Old and New, and Confesses the Details of a Certain Culinary Adventure of His Own," "Caleb Attends an Auction and Tells Esther Manset Why the Things He Paid For Were Not the Things He Planned to Buy."

As has already been noted by critics of this book, Mr. Rich does not caricature his rural group, he writes of these racy, rugged sons and daughters of old Maine with sympathy and understanding; he does not crowd his canvas; interest centers in a few strongly accentuated characters, and that interest is maintained at a sustained pitch throughout the novel. It is fatally easy to write a book of this type in which the dialect is burlesqued, the characters grossly exaggerated, and the work as a whole cheapened and standardized; but Mr. Rich has resisted any temptation in these directions, and offers his public a genuinely refreshing study of a group of people in a remote New England community, people of a sort whose numbers are steadily diminishing, and who are indeed—be it said in sober sadness—a "vanishing race." There are no finer people, there never were finer people, anywhere on earth, than the sane, sturdy, true-blue old-time New Englanders. The term, New England, used to carry a pertinent significance; it implied that there existed a mother country, an older England from which the newly established community took its name. Those men and women who settled so far away from old England were of pure English stock, and their ancient ancestry, developing through the early pioneers, crystallized into a definite type—the really representative New Englander. Even now it is generally possible for anyone who is sensitive to personality to spot a Maine man among other New Englanders; the sons of Maine are as individual in New England as are Virginians among other southerners; there is about them a quality which evades definition, but which can be felt, like the change in a current of air, as it strikes the face. Mr. Rich, in "Caleb Peaslee," conveys the sense of this quality to the reader, his Maine men and women are as essentially of Maine as Dorothy Canfield's Vermonters are essentially of Vermont.—The Hartford Courant.

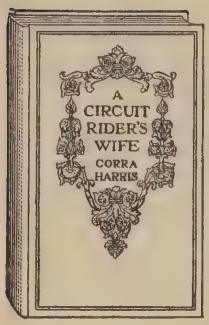
A Circuit Rider's Wife

By CORRA HARRIS



In "A Circuit Rider's Wife" Corra Harris tells of the experiences of such an itinerant minister's helpmeet. In addition to its common sense, the book tells the story of the chief characters of the town and congregation, with whom the minister's wife is "about as well acquainted as the Recording Angel is."

The immediate popularity of this story is clear to all who read it, for it is the absorbing narrative of two people who lived the Beatitudes, and for all those who want to live the Beatitudes it points the way.

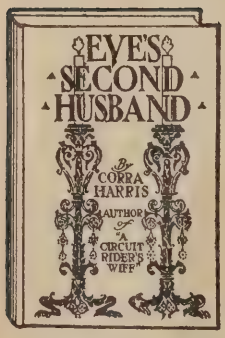
Eve's Second Husband

By CORRA HARRIS



The story of a woman's heart—a woman good and clever, pure and practical; the intimate, absorbing story of an American wife, told by herself. It is an extraordinary revelation of the feminine soul.

EVE SAYS:

"The women men admire may be industrious, but the women they love most are usually idle ones."

"Men do what they think is fair or best for them in their dealings with men, but with women they do what is easiest at the moment."

"The way to hold a husband sometimes is to let him go for a while and then grip him in a new place."

"When a man ceases to call his wife 'adorable' and 'darling' she does not need to consult her mirror."

"I have never seen a woman in my life who did not admire a reformed man more than she respected just a good man."

"To be a suspicious bride is an incredible sacrilege against love."

BARTON, F. T.

The Horse—Ailments and Accidents

The book is not written with the idea of enabling the horse-owner to do without the assistance of the qualified veterinary surgeon; in fact, the author is strongly opposed to the home-doctorings of live-stock, and believes that much mischief is frequently done through the adoption of this foolishly economical plan. The work has been expressly prepared for the service of those who, when requiring professional advice and aid, have difficulty in getting it quickly, or perhaps cannot get it at all.

"Of all contemporary English poets, Mr. A. E. Housman is the simplest and the most inimitable. Cleverness may copy cleverness, subtlety simulate subtlety, fantasy flatter fantasy; but the directness of the lyrics of 'A Shropshire Lad,' their truth of imagination, their honesty of phrase, cannot be borrowed for a moment without detection. Some have assumed the manner, some have confessed a debt by their titles, but in each case is the true attribution clear—'school of A. E. Housman.' THE SECRET OF A HAPPY LIFE. By Martin Hegland, Ph. D., Dean of the Department of Religion at St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn., and President of the Young People's Luther League of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America. 134 pages. Third edition. Cloth, $1.00.

The basis of this volume is a sermon-lecture delivered at a number of young people's conventions. As a pastor and psychologist Dr. Hegland speaks wisely and lovingly to the young people who have been baptized and nourished thru the teaching, training and example of Christian parents, teachers, and pastors, so that they have come in the years of their youth into a conscious life with God. He also speaks to those who have drifted away from God. Many will read The Secret of a Happy Life and be blessed by the reading.

PAUL OF TARSUS. By E. Kr. Johnsen, late Professor of Theology at Luther Theological Seminary. 376 pages. Cloth, $1.75.

Paul, the great missionary hero of all times, has been portrayed in this volume in such a vivid manner that the story of this great apostle and remarkable man stands out like a powerful drama. The second part of the book is a popular commentary on the Epistle of Paul.

AFTER ITS KIND. By Byron C. Nelson, Th. M. 144 pages, cloth, $1.50.

The evolution theory discussed. The sub-title of this volume is "The First and Last Word on Evolution." "The first word" is the decree of the Creator at the time the different "kinds" or species were created. "The last word" is the statement of the laws of heredity brought to light by the discoveries of Gregor Mendel. The pages of this volume are the product of years of study of a Bible-lover who has gone thru the fiery furnace of skepticism and came out firmly convinced of the scientific trustworthiness of the first chapter of the Book of Genesis. In this book are contained the conclusions of an examining and weighing of evidences and arguments for and against the theory of evolution which began when as a young man entering a State University the author's Christian faith was almost destroyed by the wave of evolutionary philosophy and pseudoscience that has swept over universities and colleges.

AN ELEMENTARY CHRISTIAN PSYCHOLOGY. By O. M. Norlie, Ph. D., S. T. D., Professor of Psychology at Luther College, Decorah, Iowa. 2*nd edition.* 270 pages, 69 illustrations. Cloth, $1.25.

Presents the subject of psychology from a Biblical point of view without doing violence to the facts of modern psychological science. It covers the ordinary topics in elementary psychology besides such questions as conscience and faith, and the natural and renewed states of man. It has 16 lessons, provided with questions, assignments and references. There are three indexes—of persons, Scripture passages and subjects.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

The Graded System for Sunday Schools

The fundamental ideas upon which this system is built, and which make it ideal for use in our Lutheran Sunday Schools, are expressed in the following points:

First—The system is based on Luther's Catechism, the Explanation, and Vogt's Bible History, the three much-cherished books of religious instruction.

Second—There is UNITY in this system. In all the Catechism and Explanation classes the same topic is studied on a given Sunday.

Third—In small Sunday Schools the unity of lesson plan permits the grouping of two or more grades in one class, without burdening the teacher with several lessons.

Fourth—There is harmony between the Bible history and the Catechism lesson. The Bible story selected, whether from the Old Testament or from the New Testament, illustrates the central thought in the Catechism lesson.

Fifth—There is constant repetition, but always enough new material to make the lesson interesting and more instructive.

Sixth—Finally, the books used in our system make the teaching both simple and interesting for even the youngest and most inexperienced teacher.
